"Where for relentless months continued night
Holds, o'er the glittering waste, her starry light."

The navies of America and England have before met upon the ocean, but they met for deadly strife. Now, too, they met for strife, equally determined, but not with each ether. They met in the holy cause of benevolence and human sympathy, to battle with the elements beneath the Arctic Carole; and the chivalric heroism which the few stout hearts of the two nations displayed in that conflicted unds a thousand-fold more to the glory of the actors, their governments and the race, than if four score ships and ten thousand armed men had fought for the mastery of each other upon the broad ocean, and battered hulks and marred corpses had gone down to the coral caves of the sea, a dreacful ifering to the demon of discord, in which event troops of widows and erphan children would have sent up a cry of warl. Now the herces advance manfully to rescue husbands and fathers, to restore them to their wives and chileren."
